Second Jail Considered By Greene County Leaders

Tuesday, March 22, 2011

A second jail could be coming to Greene County, in an effort to ease overcrowding. County leaders stress it's just speculation at this point, but a popular idea is to build a minimum security jail.

Major Kevin Spaulding with the Sheriff's Office says overcrowding has been a problem ever since the current jail opened in 2001. He says inevitably, they won't be able to control the increasing population like they've been able to do so far.

Despite the need, County Commissioners say money just isn't there. They say it may come down to asking voters for a tax increase.
